Six Others Seriously Wounded Four of the killed and Most of the Wounded diet in Mistake for Deer One Man. Who Loses a Leg. Was shot by Els Son.

Utica, Oct. 31.- The Adirondack deer hunting season, which opened on September 18 and closed at sunset to-day, cost the lives of five persons and the serious wounding of half a dozen others. Four of the five killed were shot in mistake for deer, and the majority of those wounded were also victims of the hair trigger hunter. This year's casualty list caring for them, and through the cooperashows a slight falling off as compared with

The first deer hunter to meet death in the Adirondacks this year was Theron Plumb, who on September 20 was shot by his companion, Clifford Judd, while the two were following deer near Tupper Lake. Plumb was shot through the back and died within a few hours. On September 25 Timothy M. Healy, at travelling salesman of this city, was shot by his guide, who mistook his brown coat for deer, and almost instantly killed. Roy Wires of Herkimer was killed on Octo-

6 by Alfred Winston, also of Herkimer. Wires lived several hours after having been shot, and expired in a carriage in which he was being hurried to a hospital deer. And in the same section of the Adirondacks. Charles à Dodge of Springfield, Mass., was killed just as he was about to go on a runway to watch for a deer. He was shot by Sam Brakey, who was guiding the party of hunters. Newman Cook, 18 years old, who resided in Lowville, tripped on a log as he was pursuing a deer on the afternoon of October 2 and his weapon discharging sent a bullet into his abdomen and caused his death the next day.

BAOF those wounded, but surviving. Truman Haskell, a prominent hotel keeper and guide, residing at Wilmurthad the closest call. While a party of which he was a member were returning from a deer hunting expedition a gun in the hands of othe of the hunters was discharged, the bullet shattering Haskell's shoulder blade and lodging in his back Haskell is now on the road to recovery.

On September 16, the day the season opened, William Aubrer of Croghan was sbot in mistake for a deer by his son. Aubrar recovered, but lost one of his legs. From the point of view of the hunter the season which closed to-night has not been a remarkably good one, as the conditions most of the time have been at that time in any year for the last quarrer of a century, but as a rule sports to did not find it an easy matter to obtain a short at them. The foliage was very heavy this year and remained on the shrubery until late, rendering it difficult for the hunter to see any considerable distance in the woods, and as there was but little rain during the first five weeks of the shooting season the leaves on the ground were extremely dry, making it impossible to walk on them without making a noise. These facts rendered successful still hunting impracticable until the recent rains came.

dry, making it impossible to walk on them without making a noise. These facts rendered successful still hunting impracticable until the recent rains came.

Quite a number of deer were killed during the first week of the open season, for many of them continued to come down to the water as they had been in the habit of doing during the summer, and hunters therefore had an opportunity of seeing them, but after that the animals seemed to forsake their old haunts and retire to more secluded parts of the wilderness. From what can be learned from different sources it is thought that the total number of deer killed in the same as last year will be about the same as last year.
